

The truth about police cars.

Before you order your '68 (or '69) fleet, read what Mechanix Illustrated reports about the Olds Apprehender.

Tom McCahill, Mechanix Illustrated's veteran automotive writer, tells it like he sees it in a recent issue. And after testing the Olds Apprehender, these are some of his words:

"The greatest American car I have driven since 1960."

"Though I have driven others (police cars), this Olds . . . must be rated tops . . . one of the three really great cars I've tested in the last 22 years."

". . . its superiority is not its speed or its 390-hp engine but its roadability."

"I couldn't help but think what an advantage the cops really have with these rigs for whipping in and out or reaching high speeds in an eyeblink."

". . . California and Missouri are using the Olds for police work.

In these states don't try to outrun the cops because they can eat you alive."

If you missed the report and would like to know what provoked all the enthusiasm, we have a reprint of McCahill's article. Write to: National Fleet Sales Manager, Dept. LO, Oldsmobile Division, Lansing, Michigan 48921.
